

Dear Sir/Madam

I am writing regarding the proposed changes to penalties for heavy vehicle drivers. I strongly object to further increases to fines, massive fines do not replace regular enforcement, it also promotes a culture of its all legal till you get caught which does nothing at all for safety and compliance. Furthermore the threat of those unreasonable fines is driving away prospective and veteran drivers alike. There are many people who hold a heavy vehicle license but will not work in the transport industry due the threat of one fine costing them a months pay.

Thank you for reading.

Yours sincerely

James Smith
